About the CONFERENCE

Although burning coal for electricity generation is lessening in many countries, the Bangladesh story is somewhat different. Being a new market, Bangladesh is an exciting country in terms of its coal narrative. While the high horse Western countries have heightened attention on the environment amid concerns about the adverse effects of climate change, emerging economies like India, Pakistan and Bangladesh are planning to increase reliance on fossil fuels – mainly imported coal – to fuel their growing power generation systems.

In Bangladesh, coal imports have gone up remarkably on the back of the material's rising demand in the country, thus increasing business opportunities for overseas coal suppliers. Notably, the government has laid stress on usage of coal over other fuels in generation of electricity. To ease imports into the country, the government is also mulling over elimination of import duty on coal.

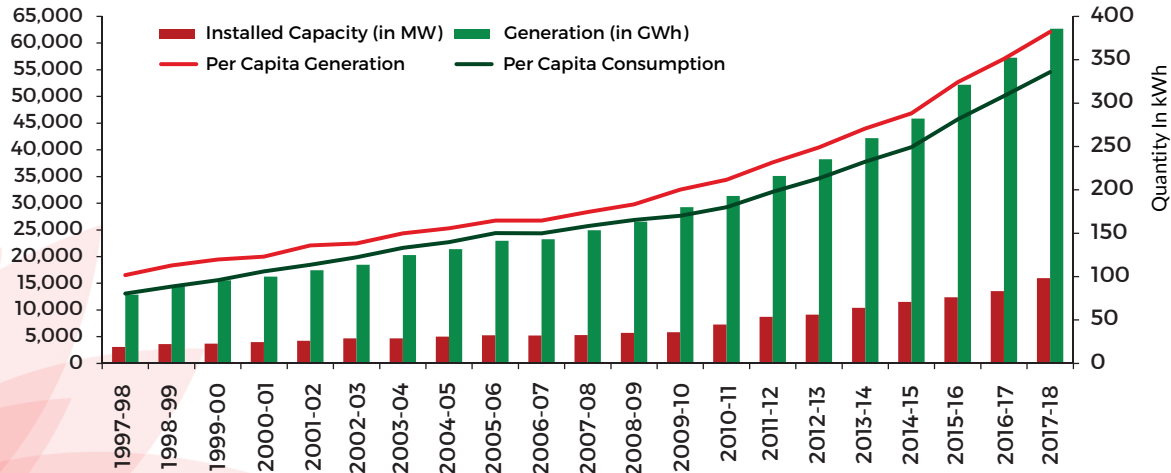

The rise in coal imports in Bangladesh has made the country a lucrative market for overseas coal suppliers. As it happens, India's Coal India Limited (CIL) too is in the process of crafting a blueprint for exporting coal to its neighbour.

Surging Power Demand

The rise in power demand is an inevitable result of rapid economic development and shortage in coal supply is the main impediment to expanding power capacity.

Bangladesh Banking on Coal to Slash Dependence on Gas-based Power

Towards the end of FY 2018 the Bangladesh Power Development Board had highlighted that gas-based power plants accounted for a lion's share in the overall installed capacity. However, under the Power System Master Plan 2016, the country is aiming to increase the share of coal-fired projects at the expense of gas-based plants by 2041, as evaluated under five possible scenarios.

Limited Domestic Availability

Bangladesh sources domestic coal from the Barapukuria coal mine, which is the sole operational mine in the country. Apart from Barapukuria, four coalfields namely Khalaspir in Rangpur, Phulbari and Dighipara in Dinajpur and Jamalgonj in Joypurhat/Naogaon have combined estimated reserves of more than 3 BnT. However, the remaining mines are under preliminary consideration, wherein production is slated to begin in 2025.

Domestic Supply Off-Balance

Bangladesh's limited domestic coal reserve was further exposed by the country's decision to suspend coal sales to the local industries from 19 March 2018 in order to augment supplies to government-owned coal-fired utilities.

Consequently, sales to local buyers witnessed a steep decline of 39% Y-o-Y to 273,287 MT in the Bangladeshi FY18.

Amid suspension of coal supply to local buyers and as a consequence of plans to expand coal-fired power plants, imports are expected to boom to cater the growing demand.

Coal shipments to Bangladesh have spiralled by 79% year-on-year to 3.02 million tonnes (MnT) in the first nine months of this year compared to a total of 1.69 MnT imported in the corresponding period last year, as per the latest vessel line-up data compiled by CoalMint Research.

Major Hurdles for Power Sector:

Cost Incurred by Bangladesh Power Board's Own Power Stations

Source: Bangladesh Power Development Board

Bangladesh Power Development Board (BPDB) has been acquiring domestic coal at a subsidized rate in order to keep a check on the cost of electricity generation. However, with more imported coal-based plants supposed to come online, it would be a challenge for the country to provide electricity at affordable tariffs.

Besides, environmental concerns resulting from emission of greenhouse gases also pose a threat to the growth in power sector.
