Japan: Ferrous scrap export offers hit new high on higher bids

Feb 18, 2022 18:27

Japanese scrap export offers increased further, hitting a new all-time high since mid-2017, the period from which SteelMint has been maintaining the data. The prices have surged owing to limited scrap availability in Japan and improved demand.

The main reason behind the continued price uptrend is a decline in shredded scrap generation due to lower automobile production amidst chip shortage. Toyota’s production is expected to fall short by 0.5 million units to 8.5 mn units

Weekly Pig Iron Production Index by Tathya.earth (As on 12 Feb 2022)

Tathya's Pig Iron (Hot Metal) Index represents the variation in production of Hot Metal (Pig Iron) on a weekly basis at different steel mills. This is a near real-time indicator of production trends in steel mills which is derived by using advanced Machine Learning leveraging the heat signals captured in the infrared bands of satellite images. The base value of the index is considered as 100 and subsequent values represent change from the base value which gives an indication of production trend. Tathya.Earth has kindly allowed SteelMint to show their Pig Iron production index in this report. More info can be found at www.tathya.earth
